

Bad Actors [2]

Anthony Shell August 2021

On the 19th June 2016 the US-based Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC) published a report containing this claim: “In late May of that year [2000], MAIR [Thomas MAIR – who had murdered the Member of Parliament Jo COX three days previously] was one of between 15 and 20 racist activists who convened in a private room at a pub near the Strand, a major thoroughfare in central London, according to Todd BLODGETT, an American who was then a paid informant for the FBI and also met with MI5.”^{1 2}

The SPLC report went on to assert that BLODGETT was accompanied on his UK trip by a number of FBI agents, and that he could (in some detail) remember a face-to-face conversation he had had with Thomas MAIR during that London 2000 meeting. The SPLC report went on to say that a person named Mark COTTERILL had largely organised that May 2000 (something Mr COTTERILL has vehemently denied).³

Mark COTTERILL founded the US-based American Friends of The BNP (AF-BNP) in January 1999. The AF-BNP provided the links required for connecting US-based groups, such as National Alliance, to the UK-based British National Party (BNP). It is noted that the FBI covert operative, Todd BLODGETT, had also worked as the US-based AF-BNP treasurer, at that time.

It was shortly after the killing of Jo COX that Mark COTTERILL made a number of absurd claims, including that “the American spooks [the FBI] did not really take that much notice or interest in us [i.e. the US far right, and especially National Alliance and the AF-BNP] ... until after 9/11”. But why did Mr COTTERILL feel compelled to proffer such a blatantly absurd opinion?^{4 5 6} And why was Mark COTTERILL so extraordinarily eager to dismiss any notion of the presence of both Thomas MAIR (who went on to murder Jo COX MP, in 2016) and covert FBI operatives / agents at that London 2000 conference?

It is noted that Thomas MAIR was (apparently, at that time) regularly requesting, paying for, and receiving far-right extremist material from National Alliance sources (i.e. National Vanguard Books newsletter/magazine, based in Hillsboro WV).⁷

⁷ However Mr. COTTERILL has insisted that he knew nothing of Thomas MAIR until the murder of Jo COX in June 2016.

The core reason behind COTTERILL's interjection is seen as an attempt to disparage any linking of MAIR's radicalisation to a collaborative effort between US-based National Alliance and the FBI.

Thomas MAIR therefore received his invitation to the National Alliance / BNP London 2000 Conference, just one year after his first contact with National Vanguard Books – regarding detailed instructions in the making of IEDs (bombs) and firearms/ammunition.

By that time National Alliance senior member (and FBI operative) Mr Todd BLODGETT was instigating National Alliance events, such as “helping to arrange” (not just observing) that London 2000 Conference. However the meeting was reportedly “largely arranged” by Mr Mark COTTERILL (being a UK citizen, who was then living in the USA, and who was also closely connected to the National Alliance).^{8 9 10}

Todd BLODGETT has admitted that he was recruited to work as an FBI operative in March 2000. The FBI was therefore using paid operatives (such as Todd BLODGETT) to help the US Government install a US-style racist, ‘white nationalist’, ‘white supremacist’, neo-Nazi movement, within the UK.¹¹

Based on that SPLC-sourced evidence it is therefore noted that Thomas MAIR had placed that terrorism munitions manufacturing order, to the US-based National Vanguard Books (a subsidiary of the far-right National Alliance), less than two weeks after David COPELAND (a member of the UK neo-Nazi group National Socialist Movement, NSM) exploded his final IED (the last of 3 nail-bombs) in Soho, central London – killing 4 people, including an unborn child and the unborn child's mother.¹² So, when did the US-based SPLC (an affiliate to the FBI) have access to that information – and what did it do with it?

What of actual events within the UK, at around that time?

The neo-Nazi NSM had been formed in 1997, as a supposedly ‘ideological’ arm of the Combat 18 group.

In early 1998 (and a year before COPELAND's murderous attack) the Independent newspaper journalist Nick RYAN met with David MYATT (a ‘National Socialist’, occultist, and founder of the NSM) at the Malvern Station Tea Room, for a lengthy interview.¹³ Coincidentally, Nick LOWLES (Searchlight) also met with David MYATT for a lengthy interview, in Shropshire, England, that same year (in 1998).¹⁴

Two particular things are very evident from the LOWLES/MYATT interview of 1998: (1) Nick LOWLES had expended a very considerable amount of time in investigating David MYATT, and MYATT's connections to the extreme, occult group Order of Nine Angels (ONA); and (2) MYATT's insistence that his only interest in ONA was that he saw that group as an especially suitable and useful source of recruits for the NSM.

During that LOWLES / MYATT interview, David MYATT insisted that he had (by then) left the NSM.

ONA has been yet another import from the USA – a derivation of the US radical left's 'new age' movement, of the late 1960s, onwards. Thus, the neo-Nazi ONA has incorporated much the same ideological baggage as that radical left's hyper-liberalism – anti-family, sexual exploitation/control, child abuse (including paedophilia), drugs, mysticism/occultism, anti-Christianity, self-centred mania, et cetera.

However, it was only this year (2021) that US State documents (court records) have been uncovered, showing that the FBI had been bankrolling the propaganda and recruitment efforts of US-originated occultist, neo-Nazi groups (i.e. AtomWaffen, ONA, et al) since at least 2003.¹⁵

At this stage, a review is therefore required of the developments in the UK police and security agencies, and the 'justice system', in the years that immediately preceded the David COPELAND bombings (of early 1999). This provides some important context (and insight) to the main subject matter of this report.

In August 1998 the Metropolitan Police Service created the Racial and Violent Crime Task Force (the MPS/RVCTF under John GRIEVE). One year later (January 1999) the MPS formed the Independent Advisory Group (IAG) to provide political direction to the MPS / RVCTF.

Leading that MPS/RVCTF/IAG endeavour (specifically in regard to matters concerning the creation and control of police policy and procedure, relating to 'racist crime') was Gerald GABLE of the Searchlight organization (re. Nick LOWLES of Searchlight – see earlier, in regard to Nick LOWLES' particular interest in NSM and ONA, in 1998).

The basic premise for the MPS/RVCTF was that it was (only) from the native, white population of the UK that problems of racist hate and violence emanated: "The brutal racist murder of Stephen Lawrence on 22nd April 1993 in South East London, shocked and horrified the diverse communities in Britain. For the Black and Minority Ethnic communities it was yet another tragic incident which further reinforced the view of the prevalence of racism in the country."

However, the MPS/RVCTF intention was clearly not to challenge, but to reinforce a "view" (presumed, by MPS/RVCTF, being held by BME communities), of the "prevalence of racism" within the white population.

This was, essentially, a grotesquely perverse narrative, being promulgated by UK State agencies (including HM Constabulary and The Crown Prosecution Service) to misdirect the process of law enforcement, and mislead the public. The MPS / RVCTF was built on an outright lie.

In fact Government data from that time (and specifically from 1997 to 2007, inclusive) was showing it was the native (white) population within the British Isles that was suffering disproportionately from extreme racist violence (including interracial homicide) by BME perpetrators – and to a huge extent.¹⁶

It is therefore difficult to understand why the RVCTF had been set up – and especially at that particular time. The much referenced (by the RVCTF) murder of the black teenager Stephen LAWRENCE had occurred some five years previously.¹⁷

It would seem that the MPS was expecting (hoping for?) some imminent act(s) of racist violence by a 'white' person or group. The RVCTF was a solution, in desperate need of a problem.

As with Thomas MAIR at that time, the 1999 London bomber David COPELAND had become obsessed with a far right, racist ideology imported from the USA. In a 2003 book on COPELAND, written by Graeme MCLAGAN (BBC) and Nick LOWLES (Searchlight) the first three chapters describe the extraordinary degree to which extreme far-right ideology had been, from the early 1990s onwards, imported from the USA.¹⁸ There is this observation from Graeme MCLAGAN (BBC) and Nick LOWLES: "A young man [David COPELAND] with a troubled childhood and a fixation with chaos and destruction, his mind had been filled with racist literature, much of which had emanated from the USA."¹⁹

I have grave concerns (and justifiable suspicions) that, just one year later, Thomas MAIR may have been specifically invited to that (BLODGET/FBI, COTTERILL organised) London 2000 Conference because of his having been observed by State agencies (the US FBI, in particular) as having an interest in obtaining the means to commit murderous acts of terrorism (such as that of David COPELAND, the previous year).

Notably, Mark COTTERILL appears to have been an important, primary source of information on the far right for (in particular) The Guardian newspaper (UK) – and for introducing under-cover newspaper reporters to various far-right individuals and organisations within both the UK and the USA.^{20 21} In 1991 Mark COTTERILL had reportedly attended a far-right rally in Belgium, in the company of an undercover reporter from The Guardian newspaper (UK).²²

Further work has shown a connection between Mark COTTERILL and the notorious UK-based, far-right (neo-Nazi) group National Action (see attached scans). And in that regard, we need to go back to July 2011, and the far-right forum IronMarch.org then being created by UK-based Benjamin RAYMOND – with its first online (Internet) appearance being at the beginning of October 2011.²³

The UK police and UK security agencies will have been closely monitoring IronMarch.org, from its very beginning. Those State agencies will have known the true identities of those persons joining, and posting comment to that extremist site – and they will undoubtedly have known the identity of the person who had set up that particular forum (i.e. Mr Benjamin RAYMOND, aka Benjamin NOYLES).

It was specifically from the IronMarch.org that a significant number of overtly far-right, ‘white supremacist’, neo-Nazi and extremely anti-Semitic groups emerged, including: The Base (USA); AtomWaffen (USA), Sonnenkreig Division (UK); and, most significantly, National Action (UK).^{24 25 26 27}

The relevance of these developments is specifically in regard to the creation of the National Action group, by Benjamin RAYMOND and Alex DAVIES, in late 2013, and the socio-political situation within the UK at that time – as follows.

The emergence of the Generation Identity (GI) movement, in mainland Europe (and in the UK, circa 2013), was the result of the growing visibility (to the general public) of the intent by the ruling political classes in Europe and (especially) the USA to replace much of the native (white) population of Europe, through the use of ‘managed’ mass migration from (especially) non native European (non white) countries.^{28 29 30}

This was increasingly being revealed in the pronouncements (declarations of policy intent and of the planned enforcement) through powerful global agencies such as the UN, the EU Commission, the EU Parliament, the OSCE, and the UN-backed Global Forum on Migration and Development (GFMD). The generic description for that process has, indeed, been specifically called “population replacement” by the

²⁵ Notably, Benjamin RAYMOND has been a supportive follower (and ‘re-tweeter’) of the Twitter outputs of PROPORNOT.

²⁶ PROPORNOT has extraordinary similarities to UK-based BELLINGCAT. The PROPORNOT website was first registered on the 21st August 2016 – just three months before the US Presidential Election (Donald TRUMP versus Hilary CLINTON).

²⁷ There is the important matter of the US-based, highly cited, secretive, organization PROPORNOT has reportedly been connected to major US State and State-affiliated and Washington-based organizations, including The US State Department, The Atlantic Council (through the subsidiary, the Washington-based Digital Forensic Research Laboratory / DFRLab, and The Interpreter Magazine. It has been widely claimed that the person actually running the PROPORNOT organization is the mainstream (‘neo-conservative’, progressive globalist) political pundit Michael WEISS. On the evidence seen, this does indeed seem highly credible. Michael WEISS has worked for the Daily Beast, and The Interpreter Magazine. At the beginning of 2016 his name appears at the top of an article, in The Interpreter, saying “We are proud to announce that starting January 1st, 2016, The Interpreter will be a special project of Radio Free Europe / Radio Liberty”. Notably, RFE/RL are progenies of the CIA.

²⁹ ‘We Are Generation Identity’, Edition Ideas, 9th November 2013

³⁰ This movement started in France in 2002. It subsequently gained traction in various forms, for example: European Traditionalism; This Is Europa; European Awakening; Europa Rising; Generation Europa; and most especially Generation Identity (GI). It contained (and focused upon) a common, major concern, defined as ‘The Great Replacement’.

proponents, and potential enforcers, of that policy.³¹

GI was formed in opposition to the execution of that policy (of imposed mass migration into Europe). Obviously, such an emerging phenomenon (of reasoned, active opposition) required a rapid and decisive response from the political and industrial elite in Europe and the USA. Therefore the establishing of GI within much of Europe, and its subsequent growth in popular support, inevitably resulted in efforts by the European and North American (USA and Canada) State apparatus, and by State-supported groups, to “discredit, destabilise and destroy” GI.

In the UK that strategy included the use State agent provocateur groups (i.e. such as National Action) to create bogus neo-Nazi connections to GI. People who genuinely protested the potential loss of their homelands, lives and livelihoods had to be portrayed as fascists, ‘white supremacists’, and neo-Nazis. Coincidentally, the overtly fascist, neo-Nazi National Action was founded by Benjamin RAYMOND, together with the UK State’s PREVENT-mentored Alex DAVIES, in late September 2013 – i.e. a mere 4 months after Generation Identity (Génération Identitaire GI) first emerged within the UK.³²

Of particular note (in that regard) are these comments by the leader of National Action (RAYMOND) posted on a right-wing forum: “First, National Action was never anything to do with the New Right or the 'intellectual' counter currents talk shop. It is self-organized and self funded by fascists with no association with the wider movement or this gay 'dark enlightenment' thing. We can say this because we were founded in violent opposition to the prospect of a poorly executed British 'generation identity' clone.”

As we will see, the “violent opposition” to GI was to be achieved by proxy – by inciting hate and violence against GI members and GI events, by expropriating GI campaign issues (especially against State-imposed mass immigration, and multiculturalism) as forms of neo-Nazi ideological ‘activism’.

RAYMOND went on to expound that purpose (of the formation of National Action): “Secondly the most exceptional care was taken to warn against any attempt to 'copy' similar youth groups in Europe.”^{33 34}

Although there have been reports of RAYMOND having visited the USA, I have been unable to find any details. However, in July 2013 Benjamin RAYMOND wrote an article for publication in Sebastian ERNST RONIN’s online blog.³⁵ ERNST RONIN was, at that time, President of The National Synergist Party of North America (NSPNA). The indications are that RAYMOND’s connections to North America were, at that time, primarily to individuals and groups operating from within Canada (although, of course, that does not rule out the possibility of his having personally visited Canada, and from there crossed the border into the USA). Again, we find that (highly inappropriate) ‘white nationalism’ narrative, input from North America.

So, we have an admission by of one of the ‘co-founders’ of National Action that its primary goal was to commit/provoke “violent opposition” to the emergence of Generation Identity in Britain. And in that regard, National Action was therefore effectively operating (from its very inception) with the very same end-purpose as the extremely malevolent elements operating within the US and UK State apparatus, and their enforcers (including, in this regard, National Action).

In October 2014 a conference was held in the North of England (Preston, Lancashire) under the auspices of 'Heritage and Destiny' – the organization also created and run by Mark COTTERILL (see previously).³⁶ One of the main platform speakers at the 2014 conference (apparently organized and chaired by Mark COTTERILL) was Alex DAVIES (listed as a 'National Action activist'). Notably there is credible photographic evidence to show that that 'activism' included a group of National Action members using that same venue to prominently demonstrate their Nazi-saluting skills (see attached scans).

Therefore we see, at that venue (of the October 2014 Conference, organized by former US-based National Alliance activist Mark COTTERILL), the crowd of Nazi-saluting National Action members standing (most conspicuously) immediately behind the official flag of Ulster (Northern Ireland). [See attached photo scan]

This is a particularly good example of 'narrative fabrication', for the purpose of fomenting extreme hate – as an attempt to help provoke further hate and violence in Northern Ireland.

In actuality the post-WW2 Northern Ireland 'Troubles', that quickly brought the activities of the IRA to mainland Britain, was a resurrection of the notorious (and murderous) IRA/Nazi Germany S-Plan of 1939-1945 (of that anti-English racist, political-ideological and military alliance, resulting in the murderous, 'by proxy', terrorist bombings of civilian targets in England) – albeit with the political, financial and material support being provided by the US political left establishment, as a supposedly 'civil rights' matter.^{37 38 39 40}

So – to now return to matters in the years preceding the events in 2016.

On the 11th June 2009 The Guardian had published an article describing the activities of the US-based, 'lone actor' gunman James VON BRUNN. Two days previously VON BRUNN had shot and killed Stephen JOHNS – a security guard at the Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington DC.^{41 42}

Mark COTTERILL had reportedly assisted the Guardian in the preparation of its report by claiming (to the Guardian newspaper, and therefore to Guardian readers) that information from his "database" showed that VON BRUNN had attended American Friends of The British National Party meetings (AF-BNP – COTTERILL's own USA-based organization).

See, for example: 'The Blue Shirts', Anti-Fascist Action (AFA), Fighting Talk, Issue 6, pages 16 to 18.

⁴² 'Suspect in Holocaust Museum Guard Killing Has Links To BNP', by Matthew Taylor and Daniel Nasaw, The Guardian, Friday 6th May 2016 (modified version of article first published 7 years previously, on the 11th June 2009).

In that Guardian article Mark COTTERILL is reported as saying that: “He [VON BRUNN] did attend meetings. I have just checked my database and he is down as ‘meetings only’, so he was not a major donor, although he may have put some money on the plate when it was passed round.”⁴³ In that same Guardian 2009 article it is also claimed that the FBI operative Todd BLODGETT had also attended the AF-BNP meetings, with James VON BRUNN, in Arlington County (Virginia USA) in circa 2001.

Notably (and inexplicably), just 6 weeks before the 2016 UK EU Referendum – and just five weeks before the brutal murder of Jo COX – the Guardian modified that old 2009 article (originally prepared in the USA, on the 12th June 2009, at 19:18 hours EDT).⁴⁴ UK-based Guardian staff members made those (then, seemingly unnecessary) changes on the 6th May 2016, at 09:15 hours BST.^{45 46 47} (See attached scans)

It is therefore difficult not to conclude that the Guardian (and, perhaps, others) had prior expectation of an impending terrorist atrocity – and that both Todd BLODGETT and Mark COTTERILL would be called upon to provide appropriate information to substantiate the resulting media narrative,⁴⁸

Evidence presented by the prosecution in the course of MAIR’s trial included a photo of some 40 copies (1999 to 2003) of the National Vanguard magazine (a National Alliance publication). As with David COPELAND, Thomas MAIR’s interest in Nazism (and his presumed extreme radicalization) was obviously being driven specifically by material being produced, and sent, from the USA.^{49 50 51 52 53 54 55}

Notably, MAIR appears to have been especially obsessed with the history of the emergence of Nazism

⁴³ In that same Guardian 2009 article it is reported that Todd BLODGETT told the reporters he attended AFBNP meetings with VON BRUNN in Arlington County, circa 2001.

⁴⁴ The Guardian article, downloaded on the 24th June 2016

⁴⁵ The source code of the web page (including the metadata) shows the article being modified and published at 09:15 hours, BST, 6th May 2016 (equivalent to 04:15 hours EDT).

⁴⁶ Retrospective changes of that sort – especially for major mainstream news outlets – are very rare. And changes are almost always non-trivial and are driven by the need to correct serious factual errors or to avoid damaging litigation (i.e. for claimed defamation).

⁵² Other notable books in MAIR’s collection included ‘The Patriotic Traitors’ (by David LITTLEJOHN) and ‘Patriot Traitors’ (by Adrian WEALE). Such work can be represented as examinations of the way in which nominally patriotic individuals can be drawn into the support of fascistic (and/or Nazi) ideologies.

Therefore, given the information revealed by both the US-based SPLC and the UK-based Guardian newspaper, it would be reasonable to have expected that Thomas MAIR would have been on 'The Terrorism Watch List' of both the US FBI and the MPS / SO15 / MI5 – as a particular 'Person Of Interest'.

On the 16th December 2016 (just a month after the conclusion of MAIR's trial) the Home Office announced that National Action had been proscribed as a terrorist group – describing it as “a racist, anti-Semitic, and homophobic organization which stirs up hatred, glorifies violence and promotes a vile ideology.”⁵⁸

However, it is seen that no attempt was ever made by either State agencies, by mainstream media, or by 'anti-fascist' groups, to connect (publically, at least) Thomas MAIR with the National Action group – even given that this will have been the most obvious line of enquiry for such organizations to pursue.

There is an additional UK connection, in this regard, in that Mark COTTERILL has had links to the US-based National Alliance group – including in his role of researcher/journalist. And, as with Thomas MAIR, Mark COTTERILL has also had connections to white separatist movements in post-apartheid South Africa (including The Springbok Club).⁵⁹

The rather obvious question to be asked is therefore this: did Thomas MAIR attend any of the Mark COTTERILL organized, Heritage and Destiny (John TYNDALL Memorial) annual conferences in Preston, in the years immediately preceding the murder of Jo COX (in June 2016) – given MAIR's own connections to National Alliance (through National Vanguard), his interest in events in post-Apartheid South Africa, and his reported attendance at the COTTERILL organised London 2000 conference?⁶⁰

So – given all of the above – what can be concluded?

There are two main issues to be considered: firstly (1), that of the more general finding of evidence of a malign interference in UK internal affairs from the USA, to assist in (and to direct and control) major changes in UK society (cultural, demographic) – to make the UK 'just like America'; and secondly (2), the particular finding of evidence of complicity/foreknowledge by UK State-affiliated groups in two acts of domestic terrorism – of David COPELAND (1999) and Thomas MAIR (2016).

In the case of (2)/MAIR there is also evidence of: US/UK State culpability in MAIR's brutal killing of Jo COX MP; and also indications of a connection between the COPELAND and MAIR terrorism atrocities.

⁶⁰ Actually, there is credible evidence indicating that Thomas MAIR attended the Destiny and Heritage (John TYNDALL Memorial) 2014 Preston meeting, organized by Mark COTTERILL. This is based on photographs taken at the venue, together with a common interest of COTTERILL and MAIR regarding: the London 2000 Conference; the National Alliance (USA); and post-Apartheid South Africa.

So, what is the broader (historical and contemporary) context for this situation?

Much of what is described within this report has its origins in the USA.

A key objective of the US ‘progressive’ elite has been to demonize every conservative, nativist movement within Europe, especially the UK (and most especially, the English in England), of being an expression of (so called) “white nationalism” (or, preferably, of ‘white supremacist’ fascism) – as supposedly embodying the innate characteristics of a lethally racist, native people.⁶¹ It is an extreme anti-nativist ideology

To achieve that purpose, that objective (and the ‘authoritarian’ censorious narrative that it produces) was (and is) predicated upon a bitter and resentful reaction, within powerful US State institutions (including many US military / intelligence agencies), of this post 18th Century historical fact – that the USA has, essentially, been purposefully created through mass immigration into a land already occupied, whereas the nations of Europe (such as England, especially) have not. It is a truth that is very difficult to accept.

Such deep resentment has led to efforts within the US military / security, political, academic, and corporatist media institutions, to fabricate a malicious, highly dangerous political policy in that regard – a policy of fomenting lies, deceit and hate against native populations controlling their homelands.⁶²

END (4 document / image scan pages attached)

⁶¹ In the latter half of the 1990s a fundamentally conservative, traditionalist, and authentically nativist social movement began to spontaneously develop within both the UK and other parts of mainland Europe. That movement manifested itself within various groups and organizations. And as such it was a novel, emergent phenomenon that embodied and embraced pro-nativist support for the struggles of many non-European peoples throughout the World, who were being subjected to forced displacement from their homelands. It was therefore a social movement generally predicated upon the advocacy of the following: the sovereign rights of a native people of any country (including of those within Europe); the restoration (specifically within Europe) of European culture and tradition; fighting totalitarianism and authoritarianism (and, especially, globalist fascism); the implementation of localism and small (minimal) government; true conservatism, responsible ecological stewardship and maximal local self-sustainability; and a natural (i.e. a non-supremacist, non-authoritarian, and a non-eschatological) form of native spirituality. That unexpected development caused considerable alarm within the State authorities of both the UK and (most especially) the USA – and, in particular, alarm in regard to the nativist’s basic rejection of (and active opposition against) any self-serving, State imposed/mandated, hatemongering narrative.

⁶² Of preposterous, idiotic nonsense such as, for example: “... The origins of white supremacy can be traced as far back as sixteenth century England. “. FBI funded neo-Nazi book publisher, court docs reveal

By Hannah Sparks August 26, 2021 | 1:14pm | Updated

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has paid a man involved in a publishing house specializing in occult neo-Nazi books more than $100,000 since 2003, according to court filings.

The publishing house is Martinet Press, fine purveyors of Atomwaffen Division-approved books such as Iron Gates and Liber 333. The former is a book about a Satanic cult roaming a post-apocalyptic America, which opens with a scene of a child being murdered. The apparent informant is Joshua Caleb Sutter, a man with longstanding ties to white supremacist organizations. Sutter's father was a Pentacostal preacher who ran racist memorabilia stores in the area around the South Carolina capital of Columbia; Sutter and his father would take turns running the counter.

Suspect in US Holocaust museum guard killing has links to BNP

James Von Brunn attended AFBNP meetings Police charge Von Brunn with murder Von Brunn claimed the Holocaust was a hoax

A white supremacist who killed a security guard at a Holocaust memorial museum in the US has links to the British National party, which gained two MEPs in last week's European elections.

Thousands of visitors fled the museum in Washington on Wednesday after James von Brunn opened fire, killing a security guard. In the gunfight that followed, the 88-year-old was shot, and is now in a critical condition in hospital.

Yesterday it emerged that Von Brunn, a longtime antisemite, had attended meetings of the American Friends of the British National party (AFBPN), which was set up to raise funds from far-right activists in America.

Mark Cotterill, who ran the US-based organisation before it folded in 2001, said: "He did attend meetings. I have just checked my database and he is down as 'meetings only', so he was not a major donor, although he may have put some money on the plate when it was passed round."

The AFBPN treasurer, Todd Blodgett, also told the Washington Post that he and Von Brunn had attended fundraising meetings in Arlington County. The BNP leader, Nick Griffin, spoke to at least two AFBPN meetings and said the money raised by the organisation made a "significant contribution to the BNP's (2001) general election campaign".

The screenshot shows a Google search results page for the query "Mark Cotterill + Guardian". The search results include several links to articles from The Guardian, such as "Man who killed guard at Holocaust museum has links to BNP" and "BNP splinter group fights by-election". There are also social media links for Mark Cotterill on Facebook and a link to a Huffington Post article titled "I knew the Boy Next Door Killer".
